

Figure 15. Feeding burrows of the worm Heteromastus. Actual diameter 0.3 mm. A small pile of fecal pellets mark the surface opening of the burrow system. From Schäfer (1972).

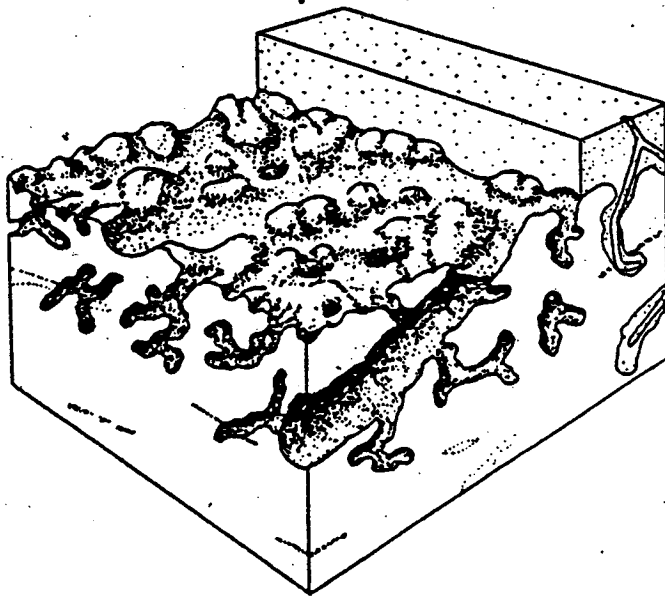

Figure 16. Sharply outlined burrows produced by excavating shrimp. Note the branching morphology of the burrows, which are up to 2 inches in diameter and can extend 6 feet or more below the bedding plane surface at which they originate.